Less buying, more sharing: expanding access-based services

Just before the launch event for the Access Hubs (AH) project, the projector we were planning to use suddenly broke! Fortunately, the team was able to borrow one at the last minute, meaning we could run the event without spending a big sum of money to buy a new projector.

This is precisely the aim of the AH project: expand rental and sharing services across Europe by supporting cities, social enterprises, and small businesses to develop access-based services, and by making it easier for people to find these services through new platforms.
